OF THE

GRAND ARMY OF THE REPUBLIC.

HISTORIC WASHINGTON.

The marking of the historic spots about the members have been industriously at work ever since, seeking out the places that have a peculiar interest for the sol-diers who camped in and about Washington during the war of the rebellion. The hospitals, rest rooms, military prisons, guard-houses, headquarters of the various Generals, the detention camps, and everything in any way connected with the congregation in Washington of bodies of soldiers will be plainly marked. The commark those mittee will go further and mark those places noted in the early history of the places noted in the early history of the Capital, the homes of the Presidents, and the spots where the old Departments of the Government held forth. As the plans to do this have been sent broadcast through the country, many letters have the control of the care of your toil and treat yourself to a grand and glorious holiday. Don't will have marked in an appropriate mainer. If you or any of your comrades with that hinders, but make up your mind to ners tattered, our heads bowed with weariness, our hearts with pain which only the thought of reaching home could lighten. What cared we for sight-seeing or for the beauty of the city? The humblest farmhouse or cottage, so it were "home," was a sight far more beautiful, and few indeed of the returning soldiers and few indeed of the returning soldiers tarried longer than compelled by duty.

To them, as to every soldier, a visit to Washington at this time offers the greatest promise of pleasure. The friends of Rear-Admiral Bob Evans, U. S. N., are telling a good story at his expense. Soon after the close of the Spanish War the people of Iowa decided to present a sword to Capt. Evans as a memento of his command of the battleship Iowa in the Santiago fight. The President, and named the "Department of Potomac." The National President, Mrs. Belle S. Morgan, of Moline, Ill., has been working untiringly in behalf of presentation was made at the home of Admiral Evans, in this city. Nearly all the prominent Iowa people in Washington were there. The affair was a social event, and many ladies graced the occasion. Mrs. Evans assisted her husband in entertain-ing the guests and presided over the collation, which was served in the dining room after the speeches were concluded "Bob" did not make a very elaborate ad-dress, but soon after the close of the formalities he said a few words which were highly appreciated by those who heard them. "Step into this room," said the naval hero. "We'll have a cigar and a toddy." Leading the way into a cozy den, Capt. Evans said: "I ran out of my facilities the said of which restorder and was E. Kelley, of Naval Veteran Association of Philadelphia, as Grand Marshal of the Naval Parade. vorite brand of whisky yesterday and was compelled to stock up with some that I don't know much about. But here is some brandy that I do know something about t has been in this house for more than 20 The fifth, sixth and seventh floors of the Turning to Representative Hull vears. he added: "Which will you take, Gov

"Why, what's the matter with the brandy?" asked Evans, in a tone of surprise. "I don't know, 'Bob,' " said Hull. "but if you have had it in the house for 20 years without drinking it, there must be omething the matter with it. I'll take the whisky."

And Capt. "Bob" retired under the roar of laughter. Senator Pettus, of Alabama, whose own blankets. It would be impossible to term will expire in March, 1903, desires "Confucius" to his friends. He is hale and hearty at 82, but his preternaturally solemn air of peering at one over the top of his "spees," his shiny bald head and his goat-like white whiskers make him of the coming National Encampment I seem the veriest Methuselah in age as he said to be a Confucius for wisde thetic sight to see all survivors that could be gotten together of that great army that is also said that he can punish more "chewing" tobacco than any other five men in the Senate. An advertisement in one of the Wash ngton papers calls for an "Infidel" pare material for certain books. It is avorable comment on the moral tren the times and the spread of Christian teaching that to find an infidel he has to be advertised for as one advertises for old junk or cast-off clothes.

CADETS-AT-LARGE.

Why They Are Appointed by the President Some one has been rushing into print, eaving behind him an atmosphere positively lurid with his hot indignation over the fact that the President is appointing Cadets-at-large to West Point, the "sons of their fathers," or, in plain English, the sons of men who wear the shoulder-straps of high rank in the military service of the country. He pointedly asks:

"If these conditions prevail in the fu-ture, what is to become of the ambitious sons of farmers, mechanics, policemen and hucksters? Perhaps, in the event of trouble, the latter may be allowed to join the ranks and do the Nation's fighting, as of yore."

Somebody ought to tell the agitated in juirer that the sons of the above will go ight straight on acquiring everything in sight, as bright American boys have a habit of doing, and that there is no law written or unwritten, that will prevent written or unwritten, that will prevent them achieving all that they desire and develop capacity for. The cadetships to West Point and Annapolis belong to the people, and are parceled out by the mem-bers of Congress. But the officers of the Army and Navy have no Congressmen to look out for them, or for the interests of their some since they belong "to the their sons, since they belong "to the Union," and not to States or Districts. To meet this contingency Congress created the cadetships-at-large. But for this ex-cellent provision there would be very few sons of officers in the military or naval service. As the law now stands, the rec-ords of our National history show great military names handed down from father to son, and made famous for both coun-try and flag through a long line of brilliant achievements on land and sea. Our military schools are the finest in the world. If there is anything in heredity, the sons of men who in these schools received the education that made them military leaders must transmit these splen-did traits to their sons, and in the end it must make them more valiant in war and reflect greater honor upon the service and

The Canal Commission.

The President does not intend to hurry himself about appointing the new Canal Commission. Those who are informed say that he has not even thought about the personnel of the body. The law distinctly declares that the President must first make arrangements to secure satisfactory title and that he must secure control of the land by treaty, before he appoints the Commission. The Commission would have nothing to do until all these preliminaries were arranged. Gossip about who shall sit on the Commission is futile at this sit on the Commission is futile at this time. The law declares that four of the seven members shall be "learned and skilled in the science of engineering, and of the four at least one shall be an officer of the United States Army, and cer of the United States Army, and at least one other shall be an officer of the United States Navy, the said officers, re-spectively, being either upon the active or the retired list of the Army or of the
